C O M 255 C O M

Encyclopaedia Britannica (1771)

Historical source

Entry ID: `entry-c-o-m-255-c-o-m-2448`
Volume ID: 144133902
Character Count: 7142

Extracted Text

makes one of a group, and thinks in wretched unanity with the throng. Incumbered with the notions of others, and impoverified by their abundance, he concecites not the leaf embryo of few thoughts: open out the life wilts through the glown of ordinary writers into the bright walks of rare imagination, and singular design while the true genius is crafting all public roads into fresh untenden ground, like, up to the knees in antique try, is treading the faced foodless of great examples, with the blind-versation of a bigot faluting the papal too; comfortably hoping full: solutions for the fine on his own understanding, from the powerful charm of touching his idol's infallibility.

Such meanings of mind, fact profission of our own power, proceeds from too great admiration of others. Admiration has generally a degree of two very bad in-gedcters in its: if ignorance, and or fears, and does mifcher in compoffion, and in fic. Proof as the world is, there is more foperiously in it given, than af-funds: and its grandes of all kinds owe more of their elviation to the litlands of others minds, than to the greatest of their own. We no podficate spirit their voluntary pedefells, the figure they make among mankind would now find a high. _Infinityer and transfi-_ are forehead what the pedefull kind, and sometimes rather raife their _originals reputation_ by flowing him to be by them immobile, than their own. Homer has been tradition into mid languages: Allan tells this, that the Indians, (hopeful tutors!) have taught him to speak their tongue. When expect we from them? Not Ho-mer's Achilles, but formething, which, like Parrocius, affumes his name, and, at its peril, appears in the dead nor expedite womens Ulyfles gloriously betting out of his cloud too royal grandeir, but an Ulyfles under dis-guir, and a begant to our left. Such is that immurable father of poetry, and oracle of all the wife, whom Lycusgis transformed, and for an annual public record of wife works Solon enacted a law, that it is much to be feared, that his fo numerous translations are but as the published tellimomials of fo many nations, and ages, that this author to divine is untraflated fill.

But here,

_Gristhus nurem_ _Ville -_ Vare. and demands justice for his favourite, and ours. Great things he has done; but he might have done greater. What a fall is is from Homes eures, free as air, lofy and harmonious as the fpherer, into chillich face kies, and tinkling found! But,-in his fall, he is ill great

_Nor appears_

_Left than archangel ruin'd, and the exact_ Of _Ivyself._

Had Milton never wrote. Pope had been felt to blame; but when in Miltons genius. Homer, as it were, perfoally role to boriblighters doing him that google wrong; it is lels paradisable, lay that _affirmish_, decoration, to par Achilles in petticas a second time. How much nobler had it been, if his numbers had rolled on in fall flow, through the various modulations of maculoline melo-dy, into those grandeurs of folcmn found, which are in dipenfully demanded by the native dignity of heroic fong? How much nobler, if he had refilled the temptation of that Gootile demos, which modern poody talking, because moral! I don willke the doubtlets, divine har-many of three great names (how jully joined) of _Wil- ton, Greece,_ and _Rome?_ His verfe, but for his little feck of mortality, in its extreme parts, as his hero had in his heel; like him, had been insulterable, and imoro-tal. But, unfortunately, _that_ was undute to Helicon; as _this_ in Stryx. Harmony as well as duquencais effen-tial to potify, and a murder of a number of us about you. We made by blank verfe is, verfe unfallen, uncurlt; verfe reclaimed, remithrored in the true _language of the girls_ who ever understood, not suffered their Homer to thunder in rhime.

But topping Pops: His to have been perfect in its kind; yet it is a _translation_ filly, which differs as much from an _origini_, as the moon from the fun.

But as nothing is more caly than to write originally wrong; originals are not here recommended, but under the theory graed of the fruit rule–_Know _byful/_ La- cian, who was an original, neglected not this rule, if we may judge by the reply to one who took fone freedom with him. He was as first a happened to a fortury; and when he was reflected on as fach, by being called _Premichaela_, he applied, "I am indeed the inventor of a new work. He model of which I owe to mine, and, if I do not execute it well, I deferve to be tom by twelve vulures, instead of one."

Bacon fays, " Mer feek not to know their own flock, and abilities, but fancy their puffellions to be greater, and their abilities lets, than they really arc." Which is in effect dying. " That we ought to exert more than we do, and that, on exertion, our probability of fuccefs is greater than we conceive."

Now have welcom soon only, but in different too, in favor of originals. His puppy mist travelled around the intellectual world; and, with a more than eagles eye, fairy, and has pointed out, blank places, or dark spots in it, on which the human minder house flows of thefe have been embrightened faces; Some are being fulfilled.

Moreover, to boundless ear the bold excursions of the human mind, that in the vail voit beyond real coffences, it can call forth shadowy beings, and unknown worlds, as numerous, as bright, and perhaps as falling as the flats , fuch quite-original beatuities we may call parodi-faical.

_Nates fine feminine facets._

When fish an ample area for renowned adventure in ori-gird attempts lies before on, frail we be as mere denim types, conserving to the prent age final fireman of ex- excellence from its grand referoir in antiquity; and thole too perhaps mudded in the pafs / Originals due likeoc-nuts; have no more teeth and, yet stalled by none, and the gaze of all: all other compotions (if they hine at all) fine in clafers; like the flies in the galaxy; where, like bad neighbours, all suffer from all; each particular being diminished, and should loft in the thing.

If thoughts of this nature prevailed; if ancients and moderates were no longer confidered as matters and pupils,

T C A B ( 2 ) C A B which compole it a this cabbula is divided into three kinds, the gemartie, the uncommon, and the tenuta or themurah. The fifth whereof confits in taking the letters of a Hebrew word for ciphers or arithmetical numbers, and explaining every word by the arithmetic caling of the letters wherein it is composed. The fecond fort of cabbals, called notaricon, confits in takking every particular letter of a word for an entire edition; and the third, called themumafi, _I.e._ changes, confits in making different transfodions or changes of letters, placing one for the other, or one before the other.

Among the Christians likewise, a certain fort of magic is, by miflake, called cabbula, which confits in using improper certain puffages of ferripture for magic operations, or in forming magic characters or figures with flars and talifiments.

Some vitanaries, among the Jews, believe, that Jesus Christ through his miracles by virtue of the my-flerts of the cabbala.

Source record

- Dataset: `NationalLibraryOfScotland/encyclopaedia_britannica_illustrated`
- Dataset Revision: `309f765b1ecc83e0a7f7762e44b4a927a7555443`
- Page ID: `britannica:309f765b1ecc83e0a7f7762e44b4a927a7555443:train:2448`
  Filename: `page-2448-f5e4884f245d.jpg`
  Row Index: 2448
  SHA256: `f5e4884f245dcd6a...`

- Page ID: `britannica:309f765b1ecc83e0a7f7762e44b4a927a7555443:train:2464`
  Filename: `page-2464-24f450326eee.jpg`
  Row Index: 2464
  SHA256: `24f450326eee13b0...`

makes one of a group, and thinks in wretched unanimity with the throng. Incumbered with the notions of others, and impoverished by their abundance, he conceives not the leaſt embryo of new thought; opens not the leaſt viſta through the gloom of ordinary writers, into the bright walks of rare imagination, and ſingular deſign; while the true genius is croſſing all public roads into freſh untrodden ground, he, up to the knees in antiquity, is treading the ſacred footſteps of great examples, with the blind veneration of a bigot ſaluting the papal toe; comfortably hoping full abſolution for the ſins of his own underſtanding, from the powerful charm of touching his idol's infallibility.

Such meanneſs of mind, ſuch proſtration of our own powers, proceeds from too great admiration of others. Admiration has generally a degree of two very bad ingredients in it; of ignorance, and of fear; and does miſchief in compoſition, and in life. Proud as the world is, there is more ſuperiority in it given, than aſſumed: and its grandees of all kinds owe more of their elevation to the littleneſs of others minds, than to the greatneſs of their own. Were not proſtrate ſpirits their voluntary pedeſtals, the figure they make among mankind would not ſtand ſo high. Imitators and tranſlators are ſomewhat of the pedeſtal-kind, and ſometimes rather raiſe their original's reputation, by ſhowing him to be by them inimitable, than their own. Homer has been tranſlated into moſt languages; Ælian tells us, that the Indians, (hopeful tutors!) have taught him to ſpeak their tongue. What expect we from them? Not Homer's Achilles, but ſomething, which, like Patroclus, aſſumes his name, and, at its peril, appears in his ſtead; nor expect we Homer's Ulyſſes glorioufly burſting out of his cloud into royal grandeur, but an Ulyſſes under diſguiſe, and a beggar to the laſt. Such is that inimitable father of poetry, and oracle of all the wiſe, whom Lycurgus tranſcribed; and for an annual public recital of whoſe works Solon enacted a law; that it is much to be feared, that his ſo numerous tranſlations are but as the publiſhed teſtimonials of ſo many nations, and ages, that this author ſo divine is untranſlated ſtill.

But here,

Cynthius aurem
Vellit,—— VIRG.

and demands juſtice for his favourite, and ours. Great things he has done; but he might have done greater. What a fall is it from Homer's numbers, free as air, lofty and harmonious as the ſpheres, into childiſh ſhackles, and tinkling ſounds! But, in his fall, he is ſtill great;——

Nor appears
Leſs than archangel ruin'd, and the exceſs
Of glory obſcur'd.—— MILT.

Had Milton never wrote, Pope had been leſs to blame: but when in Milton's genius, Homer, as it were, perſonally roſe to forbid Britons doing him that ignoble wrong; it is leſs pardonable, by that effeminate decoration, to put Achilles in petticoats a ſecond time. How much nobler had it been, if his numbers had rolled on in full flow, through the various modulations of maſculine melody, into thoſe grandeurs of ſolemn ſound, which are indiſpenſibly demanded by the native dignity of heroic ſong? How much nobler, if he had reſiſted the temptation of that Gothic dæmon, which modern poeſy taſting, became mortal? O how unlike the deathleſs, divine harmony of three great names (how juſtly joined!) of Milton, Greece, and Rome? His verſe, but for his little ſpeck of mortality, in its extreme parts, as his hero had in his heel; like him, had been invulnerable, and immortal. But, unfortunately, that was undipt in Helicon; as this in Styx. Harmony as well as eloquence is eſſential to poeſy; and a murder of his muſic is putting half Homer to death. Blank is a term of diminution; what we mean by blank verſe is, verſe unfallen, uncurſt; verſe reclaimed, reinthroned in the true language of the gods; who never thundered, nor ſuffered their Homer to thunder in rhime.

But ſuppoſing Pope's Iliad to have been perfect in its kind; yet it is a tranſlation ſtill; which differs as much from an original, as the moon from the ſun.

But as nothing is more eaſy than to write originally wrong; originals are not here recommended, but under the ſtrong guard of the firſt rule,—Know thyſelf. Lucian, who was an original, neglected not this rule, if we may judge by his reply to one who took ſome freedom with him. He was at firſt an apprentice to a ſtatuary; and when he was reflected on as ſuch, by being called Prometheus, he replied, "I am indeed the inventor of a new work, the model of which I owe to none; and, if I do not execute it well, I deſerve to be torn by twelve vultures, inſtead of one."

Bacon ſays, "Men ſeek not to know their own ſtock, and abilities; but fancy their poſſeſſions to be greater, and their abilities leſs, than they really are." Which is in effect ſaying, "That we ought to exert more than we do; and that, on exertion, our probability of ſucceſs is greater than we conceive."

Nor have we Bacon's opinion only, but his aſſiſtance too, in favour of originals. His mighty mind travelled round the intellectual world; and, with a more than eagle's eye, ſaw, and has pointed out, blank ſpaces, or dark ſpots in it, on which the human mind never ſhone: ſome of theſe have been enlightened ſince; ſome are benighted ſtill.

Moreover, ſo boundleſs are the bold excurſions of the human mind, that in the vaſt void beyond real exiſtence, it can call forth ſhadowy beings, and unknown worlds, as numerous, as bright, and perhaps as laſting as the ſtars; ſuch quite-original beauties we may call paradiſaical,

Natos ſine ſemine flores. OVID.

When ſuch an ample area for renowned adventure in original attempts lies before us, ſhall we be as mere leaden pipes, conveying to the preſent age ſmall ſtreams of excellence from its grand reſervoir in antiquity; and thoſe too perhaps mudded in the paſs? Originals ſhine like comets; have no peer in their path; are rivalled by none, and the gaze of all: all other compoſitions (if they ſhine at all) ſhine in cluſters; like the ſtars in the galaxy; where, like bad neighbours, all ſuffer from all; each particular being diminiſhed, and almoſt loſt in the throng.

If thoughts of this nature prevailed; if ancients and moderns were no longer conſidered as maſters and pupils, which compoſe it: this cabbala is divided into three kinds, the gematrie, the notaricon, and the temura or themurah. The firſt whereof conſiſts in taking the letters of a Hebrew word for ciphers or arithmetical numbers, and explaining every word by the arithmetical value of the letters whereof it is compoſed. The ſecond ſort of cabbala, called notaricon, conſiſts in taking every particular letter of a word for an entire diction; and the third, called themurah, i. e. change, conſiſts in making different tranſpoſitions or changes of letters, placing one for the other, or one before the other.

Figure 1: *
Source scan: page-2448-f5e4884f245d.jpg

Among the Chriſtians likewiſe, a certain ſort of magic is, by miſtake, called cabbala, which conſiſts in uſing improperly certain paſſages of ſcripture for magic operations, or in forming magic characters or figures with ſtars and taliſmans.

Some viſionaries, among the Jews, believe, that Jeſus Chriſt wrought his miracles by virtue of the myſteries of the cabbala.

CABBALISTS, the Jewiſh doctors who profeſs the ſtudy of the cabbala.

In the opinion of theſe men, there is not a word, letter, or accent in the law, without ſome myſtery in it. The Jews are divided into two general ſects; the karaites, who refuſe to receive either tradition or the talmud, or any thing but the pure text of ſcripture; and the rabbiniſts, or talmudiſts, who, beſides this, receive the traditions of the ancients, and follow the talmud.

The latter are again divided into two other ſects; pure rabbiniſts, who explain the ſcripture, in its natural ſenſe, by grammar, hiſtory, and tradition; and cabbaliſts, who, to diſcover hidden myſtical ſenſes, which they ſuppoſe God to have couched therein, make uſe of the cabbala, and the myſtical methods above mentioned.

CABECA, or Cabesse, a name given to the fineſt ſilks in the Eaſt Indies, as thoſe from 15 to 20 per cent. inferior to them are called barina. The Indian workmen endeavour to paſs them off one with the other; for which reaſon, the more experienced European merchants take care to open the bales, and to examine all the ſkains one after another. The Dutch diſtinguiſh two ſorts of cabecas; namely, the moor cabeca, and the common cabeca. The former is ſold at Amſterdam for about 21½ ſchellinghen Flemiſh, and the other for about 18¾.

CABENDA, a port-town of Congo, in Africa, and ſubject to the Portugueſe: E. long. 12°, and S. lat. 4°.

CABIDOS, or Cavidos, a long meaſure uſed at Goa, and in other places of the Eaſt Indies belonging to the Portugueſe, to meaſure ſtuffs, linens, &c. and equal to ⅘ of the Paris ell.

CABIN, in the ſea-language, a ſmall room, or apartment, whereof there are a great many in ſeveral parts of a ſhip; particularly on the quarter-deck, and on each ſide of the ſteerage, for the officers of the ſhip to lie in.

The great cabin is the chief of all, and that which properly belongs to the captain or chief commander.

CABINET, or Cabbinet, the moſt retired place in the fineſt part of a building, ſet apart for writing, ſtudying, or preſerving any thing that is precious.

A complete apartment conſiſts of a hall, anti-chamber, chamber, and cabinet, with a gallery on one ſide. Hence we ſay, a cabinet of paintings, curioſities, &c.

Cabinet alſo denotes a piece of joiner's workmanſhip, being a kind of preſs or cheſt, with ſeveral doors and drawers.

There are common cabinets of oak or of cheſnut, varniſhed cabinets of China and Japan, cabinets of inlaid work, and ſome of ebony, or the like ſcarce and precious woods.

Formerly the Dutch and German cabinets were much eſteemed in France, but are now quite out of date, as well as the cabinets of ebony, which came from Venice.

CABIRI, a term in the theology of the ancient Pagans, ſignifying great and powerful gods; being a name given to the gods of Samothracia. They were alſo worſhipped in other parts of Greece, as Lemnos and Thebes, where the cabiria were celebrated in honour of them: theſe gods are ſaid to be, in number, four, viz. Axieros, Axiocerſa, Axiocerſus, and Caſmilus.

CABIRIA, feſtivals in honour of the cabiri, celebrated in Thebes and Lemnos, but eſpecially in Samothracia, an iſland conſecrated to the cabiri. All who were initiated into the myſteries of theſe gods, were thought to be ſecured thereby from ſtorms at ſea, and all other dangers. The ceremony of initiation was performed by placing the candidate, crowned with olive-branches, and girded about the loins with a purple ribband, on a kind of throne, about which the prieſts, and perſons before initiated, danced.

CABLAN, the name of a kingdom and city of India, beyond the Ganges.

CABLE, a thick, large, ſtrong rope, commonly of hemp, which ſerves to keep a ſhip at anchor.

There is no merchant-ſhip, however weak, but has at leaſt three cables; namely, the chief cable, or cable of the ſheet-anchor, a common cable, and a ſmaller one.

Cable is alſo ſaid of ropes, which ſerve to raiſe heavy loads, by the help of cranes, pullies, and other engines. The name of cable is uſually given to ſuch as have, at leaſt, three inches in diameter; thoſe that are leſs are only called ropes of different names, according to their uſe.

Every cable, of what thickneſs ſoever it be, is compoſed of three ſtrands; every ſtrand of three ropes; and every rope of three twiſts: the twiſt is made of more or leſs threads, according as the cable is to be thicker or thinner.

In the manufacture of cables, after the ropes are made, they uſe ſticks, which they paſs firſt between the ropes of which they make the ſtrands, and afterwards between the ſtrands of which they make the cable, to the end that they may all twiſt the better, and be more regularly wound together; and alſo, to prevent them from twining or intangling, they hang, at

Figure 2: *
Source scan: `page-2464-24f450326eee.jpg`