Britannica Volume 191320560 Row 1803

Encyclopaedia Britannica (1771)

Historical source

Entry ID: `entry-britannica-volume-191320560-row-1803-1803`
Volume ID: 191320560
Character Count: 8749

Extracted Text

EN G E 141 T E N G

_Exgraving, the real comidifier and of pollicity. Engraving in this country fuuted a heavy his win when he died; and if the death of to excelture an still may be considered as a public lolc, his certainly the most delt reflect to Woolley who deal while he was yet improving in that excellence (b).

Chartshin has been termed a mannerit to his draw-ings, but he will certainly be allowed to be an excellent one on his etching are watery field. Peeling in the department of ceahman no arilt has for happily rendered the picture of Claude. Lorraine as Francis Vivaress than its with reflects to serial, perspective, the peculiar characteristic of Claude. But his merits are not confined to this matter above, for he followed Raydulla, Bergheim Gaulannosph, and Guyya, with green forests. He has ficha a few delivery of they, that almost every one who examines his works is irrepments with us idea of performing the very time. Two artily, it is then mentioned, have excelled in the etching department. We cannot, however, until the name of Parnentes ywho, to originality of style, which is apparently fontuences, joints or certain granden which between being stipulated. He has remained to perfectly in figured a representation of the Greek and Roman colonies and ruins, that travellers were often embedded that they have ruled their ideas beyond the magnitude of the superfluitudes themselves. It is utterly that to work of this insufenduous nature, a degree of regarded in the execution cererotions and the fullizory of the folghe's and that probation a fili greater power over the mining, than if they had been more polished. Some have suffered his fingers and was inclined could. "I find each best seen in geniously painted by an excellent arti. All Bartolucci. B For[tied by if thepurchades of the works of Pernnezzi, get to mind me for their money in the building way. I figures may be grouped out for soign for nothing." Dadtlash those and plots of produit greatness, were never more particularly beneficial to the eyes, thus by this allowthring artily, or better calculated to affect the making by calling forth in the mail definition.

We have another striking influence of limited etching in a different portrait of the art, in the works of Kildinger, a name which brings along with it all the Savage feerery or nature.

* Afterthing walves in raging troops defend.

They fallen on the feed and pierce his mighty hearty

THOSON'S Winter.

For we shall ever end home peculiar beauty to ad-mirts, even in the flightsed productions of poems, as well as in the mund perled productions of the burma.

There are fine artily who do not express, that exciting was unknown to Bolsters, who has done in much walk out its andis from which we may really flipped how much more hours would have affected with this charming acquisition. For the truth of this reminds we may upped to his landscapes from Rubens, his animated por-trats from Vanleyke, and his productions from the Plee mith school of library, particularly last large print of the _Engraving_ taking down from the street from Ruben.

There is a fine influence of linear effect in a print of eFrench convenient piece by Wille. One of the figures is thinking out of a glide, and the artist has small deceptively described the texture of the drinker's face through the gids. In the tune print, a female figure these great little in this way, given the floor is characterterized by lines: and the whole filmy marks the molt proper mode of treating falsely due of where local nature. The beautiful print of the Petrì Phalecies, is also as al-mobula stimulation, particularly the little polluted globals which has just mounted from the hall. When there are engraved in a figure some method of crafting, they go exactly every day late after she refused to the fluight reprefeuted. The scientific Picart forms to have been in much aware of this, that is a print of his organizing of a large sample group of beliefs, upon the estimated child of Perriere, he adopted this flyle in order to highlight the imbalance.

MalG's print of Marshall Harcourt, is one of the many fine effects of permits engoringly, and although it was received at an near period of the art, in abounds with no final degree of taille. The celebrated print called the table-body from Titlin, of the Earl Dupper, allo contains a considerable degree of distinct differentiation, though is founded carries it to affetation. He is rather linguistically like male and engragable hair. Yet the portraits of MarthaHarcourt and Boldonne the ferocay may be deemed acceptable.

Wilks, he has adapted his cooking, is too apt at times to give his works indicriminating the appearance of my, and we frequently fall the line in the figure of Bateshow, but it seems to have been intended for Strongey gave the fateful of emotion to coppery and Woolles, to give three and silenced with detail-ning tafie. Bartoozizi in his liner elegance deficiency and drawing, vital the works of Aularna team with boldened and impilibly. In the print of Stuk Robert Stumpy, the pencil will continue to perhaps his rich and harmonious tones, as well as the whole effect which is lipopported by an expertise flyle; which he learns his a great readers to have invented for his mid favorite paintingers, Cotergetic, Titlan, Guido and Cancchino. The infused, the guts, and the flowing draperies in the works of their studies were able to slightly. His sleeping Cupid from Guido, and the prints of the Venus and Donate from Titlan, will ever be effected as chef Greenwich the thorax cry.

Having thus attempted to fulfill our original intention of discriminating the small expeditive information of lines, and of analyzing and illustrating their various power and effects in originating, we shall now conclude that deleteriousness and if, from the nature of the fish-jeri, and from the limits of the Becky, we have failed in marking any bullish that in the galaxy of the art; and it as fault the schonboarded, that we have not omittedome of thief of the first magnitude.

Ewaxrina upon Glifs. See GLarst, Engraving on.

EsxKriina Execution a criminal, fo reviewing was not allowed to take fanc-tany and abquire the realm, but his flecing to facilitate Xemplar. was held an escape in the officer.

Executive in the two of Scotland. See Law _Index._ Exerction, in the French mutus; is uifed to denote the manner of finging, or of the performance of a long. "As to the manner of finging, called in France overs-tion, no nation may, with any probability disputes with the French. If the French, by their comments with the Italian hasn gained a bobier competition, the Italiana have made their advantage of the French, in learning of them a more polite, moving, and exqui-fine execution. St Bernardo ExECUTIVE POWER. The figures executed power of those kingdings is ruled by our laws in a finele person, the king or quest for the time being. See the article Kivo.

The executive power, in this flatre, hath a right to a negative in parliament, i. e. to refe affien to any able others, otherwise the two other branches of legitimate power would, or might, become deloptic.

ExECUTON, a section nominated by te statues, to take care to one his will and whatever executed per performed, and his effects dipofied of according to the te-nor of the vill. See law.

Exercise, in Sex Laws, figurifies either the perfon entitled to forced to the movable elate of one deceased, or who by law or special appointment is intrudited with the administration of its ExECUTON, in Laws, is where we often be free that it, made to be deceived after wards by entry, livery or wit. Leads for years, anuities, conditions, SSc. are termed interviances exec-ency.

ExECUTRY, in Sexe Lata, is the snowable else falling to the electron. Under exercices, or noworables, is complicated every thing that moves itself, or can be moved if such as cons, cattle, furniture, ready money, Sec.

ExEDRÆ, in antiquity, denoted balls with many facts, where the philosophies, protection, and men of farming, net for discounts and dispatches. The word occurs in excellent writers as a general name for field buildings as were difficult from the main body of the churches, and yet within the limits of the church taken in the largest fields. Among the seconder the chief was the BarrettX.

ExEGESIS, a dificultr by way of explanation or comments upon my subjects. In the Scotts universities, there is to scientific among the students in diversity, call-ed an everly, in which a question is fitted by the re-fenders, who is then provided by two or three other student in their turn's during which tuna the profilfer moderates, and River the difficulties which the re-founds cannot overcome.

Source record

- Dataset: `NationalLibraryOfScotland/encyclopaedia_britannica_illustrated`
- Dataset Revision: `309f765b1ecc83e0a7f7762e44b4a927a7555443`
- Page ID: `britannica:309f765b1ecc83e0a7f7762e44b4a927a7555443:train:1803`
  Filename: `page-1803-0b6da50e5c8a.jpg`
  Row Index: 1803
  SHA256: `0b6da50e5c8a63c3...`
- Page ID: `britannica:309f765b1ecc83e0a7f7762e44b4a927a7555443:train:1805`
  Filename: `page-1805-226885408318.jpg`
  Row Index: 1805
  SHA256: `2268854083181b93...`

Engraving. the real connoiſſeur and of poſterity. Engraving in this country ſuſtained a heavy loſs when he died; and if the death of ſo excellent an artiſt may be conſidered as a public loſs, it is certainly the more felt with reſpect to Woollet, who died while he was yet improving in that excellence (E).

Chattelaine has been termed a manneriſt in his drawings, but he muſt certainly be allowed to be an excellent one: his etchings are variety itſelf. Perhaps in the department of etching no artiſt has ſo happily tranſlated the pictures of Claude de Lorraine as Francis Vivares; that is, with reſpect to aerial perſpective, the peculiar characteriſtic of Claude. But his merits are not confined to this maſter alone; for he followed Ruyſdale, Berghem, Gainſborough, and Cuype, with great ſucceſs. He has ſuch a free delivery of ſtyle, that almoſt every one who examines his works is irreſiſtibly impreſſed with an idea of performing the very ſame. Few artiſts, it has been mentioned, have excelled in the etching department. We cannot, however, omit the name of Peranezzi; who, to originality of ſtyle, which is apparently ſpontaneous, joins a certain grandeur which had never been ſurpaſſed. He has tranſmitted to poſterity ſo ſpirited a repreſentation of the Greek and Roman edifices and ruins, that travellers have often confeſſed that they have raiſed their ideas beyond the magnitude of the ſuperſtructures themſelves. It is certain that in works of this ſtupendous nature, a degree of ruggedneſs in the execution correſponds with the ſublimity of the ſubjects; and thus produces a ſtill greater power over the mind, than if they had been more poliſhed. Some have cenſured his figures, and not without cauſe. This defect has been ingeniouſly palliated by an excellent artiſt, Mr Bartolozzi. "For (ſaid he) if the purchaſers of the works of Peranezzi, get ſo much for their money in the building way, the figures may be ſuppoſed to be given for nothing." Doubtleſs thoſe vaſt piles of periſhing grandeur, were never more judiciouſly preſented to the eye, than by this aſtoniſhing artiſt, or better calculated to affect the mind by calling forth its moſt ſublime ideas.

We have another ſtriking inſtance of ſpirited etching in a different purſuit of the art, in the works of Ridinger, a name which brings along with it all the ſavage ſcenery of nature.

"Aſſembling wolves in raging troops deſcend.
——— They faſten on the ſteed and pierce his mighty heart."

THOMSON'S Winter.

For we ſhall ever find ſome peculiar beauty to admire, even in the ſlighteſt productions of genius, as well as in the moſt perfect productions of the burin.

There are few artiſts who do not regret, that etching was unknown to Bolſwert, who has done ſo much without its aid; from which we may eaſily ſuppoſe how much more he could have effected with this charming acquiſition. For the truth of this remark we may appeal to his landſcapes from Rubens, his animated portraits from Vandyke, and his productions from the Flemiſh ſchool of hiſtory, particularly his large print of the Engraving. taking down from the croſs from Rubens.

There is a fine inſtance of linear effect in a print of a Flemiſh converſation piece by Wille. One of the figures is drinking out of a glaſs, and the artiſt has moſt deceptively deſcribed the texture of the drinker's face through the glaſs. In the ſame print, a female figure ſhews great ſkill in this way, even the floor is characterized by lines; and the whole ſtrongly marks the moſt proper mode of treating ſubjects of a mere local nature. The beautiful print of the Petit Phyſicien, is alſo an admirable imitation, particularly the little pellucid globule which has juſt mounted from the ſhell. When lines are engraved in a ſquare acute method of croſſing, they generally convey the idea of hardneſs to the ſubject repreſented. The ſcientific Picart ſeems to have been ſo much aware of this, that in a print of his engraving of a large marble groupe of horſes, from the animated chiſſel of Perriere, he adopted this ſtyle in order to heighten the imitation.

Maſon's print of Marſhal Harcourt, is one of the many fine efforts of portrait engraving; and although it was executed at an early period of the art, it abounds with no ſmall degree of taſte. The celebrated print (called the table-cloth) from Titian, of the Laſt Supper, alſo contains a conſiderable degree of linear diſcrimination, although he ſometimes carries it to affectation. He is rather ſingular in his mode of engraving hair. Yet the portraits of Marſhal Harcourt and Briſaſiere the ſecretary may be deemed exceptions.

Wille, by the magic of his tooling, is too apt at times to give his works indiſcriminately the appearance of bronze; and we frequently find the ſame in the figures of Balechow: but it ſeems to have been reſerved for Strange to give the ſoftneſs of carnation to copper; and to Woollet, to give force and clearneſs with diſcriminating taſte. Bartolozzi in his lines elegance delicacy and drawing; while the works of Audran teem with boldneſs and ſimplicity. In the prints of Sir Robert Strange, the greateſt excellence is perhaps his rich and harmonious tones, as well as the whole effect, which is ſupported by an expreſſive ſtyle; which he ſeems in a great meaſure to have invented for his moſt favourite painters, Correggio, Titian, Guido, and Guerchino. The ſoftneſs, the guſto, and the flowing draperies in the works of theſe maſters, were his delight. His ſleeping Cupid from Guido, and the prints of the Venus and Danae from Titian, will ever be eſteemed as chef d'œuvres in the linear art.

Having thus attempted to fulfil our original intention of diſcriminating the moſt expreſſive combinations of lines, and of analyzing and illuſtrating their various powers and effects in engraving, we ſhall now conclude theſe obſervations; and if, from the nature of the ſubject, and from the limits of the ſketch, we have failed in marking every brilliant ſtar in the galaxy of the art; it muſt at leaſt be acknowledged, that we have not omitted ſome of thoſe of the firſt magnitude.

Engraving upon Glaſs. See GLASS, Engraving on.

Engraving

(E) Although we are now contemplating linear engraving, it is but proper here to obſerve, that chalk engraving, mezzotinto, and aquatinta, have alſo made ample improvements in this country, in their various ſtyles of excellence.

Figure 1: *
Source scan: page-1803-0b6da50e5c8a.jpg

Execution ‖ Exemplar.

a criminal, ſo reviving, was not allowed to take ſanctuary and abjure the realm; but his fleeing to ſanctuary was held an eſcape in the officer.

EXECUTION, in the law of Scotland. See LAW Index.

EXECUTION, in the French muſic, is uſed to denote the manner of ſinging, or of the performance of a ſong. "As to the manner of ſinging, called in France execution, no nation may, with any probability diſpute it with the French. If the French, by their commerce with the Italians have gained a bolder compoſition, the Italians have made their advantage of the French, in learning of them a more polite, moving, and exquiſite execution." St Evremond.

EXECUTIVE POWER. The ſupreme executive power of theſe kingdoms is veſted by our laws in a ſingle perſon, the king or queen for the time being. See the article KING.

The executive power, in this ſtate, hath a right to a negative in parliament, i. e. to refuſe aſſent to any acts offered; otherwiſe the two other branches of legiſlative power would, or might, become deſpotic.

EXECUTOR, a perſon nominated by a teſtator, to take care to ſee his will and teſtament executed or performed, and his effects diſpoſed of according to the tenor of the will. See LAW.

EXECUTOR, in Scots Law, ſignifies either the perſon entitled to ſucceed to the moveable eſtate of one deceaſed, or who by law or ſpecial appointment is intruſted with the adminiſtration of it.

EXECUTORY, in Law, is where an eſtate in fee, that is, made by deed or fine, is to be executed afterwards by entry, livery, or writ. Leaſe for years, annuities, conditions, &c. are termed inheritances executory.

EXECUTRY, in Scots Law, is the moveable eſtate falling to the executor. Under executry, or moveables, is comprehended every thing that moves itſelf, or can be moved; ſuch as corns, cattle, furniture, ready money, &c.

EXEDRÆ, in antiquity, denoted halls with many ſeats, where the philoſophers, rhetoricians, and men of learning, met for diſcourſe and diſputation. The word occurs in eccleſiaſtical writers as a general name for ſuch buildings as were diſtinct from the main body of the churches, and yet within the limits of the church taken in its largeſt ſenſe. Among the exedræ the chief was the BAPTISTERY.

EXEGESIS, a diſcourſe by way of explanation or comment upon any ſubject. In the Scotch univerſities, there is an exerciſe among the ſtudents in divinity, called an exegeſis, in which a queſtion is ſtated by the reſpondent, who is then oppoſed by two or three other ſtudents in their turns; during which time the profeſſor moderates, and ſolves the difficulties which the reſpondent cannot overcome.

EXEGETES, (formed of ἐξηγέομαι, "I explain,") among the Athenians, perſons learned in the laws, whom the judges uſed to conſult in capital cauſes.

EXEGETICA, in Algebra, the art of finding, either in numbers or lines, the roots of the equation of a problem, according as the problem is either numerical or geometrical.

EXEMPLAR, a model, or original, to be imitated, or copied. See MODEL.

EXEMPLAR alſo denotes the idea, or image, conceived or formed in the mind of the artiſt, whereby he conducts his work. Such is the idea of Cæſar, which a painter has in his mind when he goes to make a picture of Cæſar.

Exemplification ‖ Exerciſe.

EXEMPLIFICATION of Letters Patent, denotes an examplar, or copy of letters patent, made from the enrolment thereof, and ſealed with the great ſeal of England. Such exemplifications are as effectual to be ſhowed or pleaded, as the letters patent themſelves.

EXEMPTION, in Law, a privilege to be free from ſome ſervice or appearance: thus, barons and peers of the realm are, on account of their dignity, exempted from being ſworn upon inqueſts; and knights, clergymen, and others, from appearing at the ſheriff's turn. Perſons of 70 years of age, apothecaries, &c. are alſo by law exempted from ſerving on juries; and juſtices of the peace, attorneys, &c. from pariſh offices.

EXERCISE, among phyſicians, ſuch an agitation of the body as produces ſalutary effects in the animal economy.

Exerciſe may be ſaid to be either active or paſſive. The active is walking, hunting, dancing, playing at bowls, and the like; as alſo ſpeaking, and other labour of the body and mind. The paſſive is riding in a coach, on horſeback, or in any other manner. Exerciſe may be continued to a beginning of wearineſs, and ought to be uſed before dinner in a pure light air; for which reaſon, journeys, and going into the country, contribute greatly to preſerve and re-eſtabliſh health.

Exerciſe increaſes the circulation of the blood, attenuates and divides the fluids, and promotes a regular perſpiration, as well as a due ſecretion of all the humours; for it accelerates the animal ſpirits, and facilitates their diſtribution into all the fibres of the body, ſtrengthens the parts, creates an appetite, and helps digeſtion. Whence it ariſes, that thoſe who accuſtom themſelves to exerciſe are generally very robuſt, and ſeldom ſubject to diſeaſes.

Boerhaave recommends bodily exerciſe in diſeaſes of a weak and lax fibre. By riding on horſeback, ſays his commentator, the pendulous viſcera of the abdomen are ſhaken every moment, and gently rubbed as it were one againſt another, while in the mean time the pure air acts on the lungs with greater force. But it is to be obſerved that a weak man ſhould not ride with a full ſtomach, but either before dinner, or after the digeſtion is nearly finiſhed; for when the ſtomach is diſtended, weak people do not bear theſe concuſſions of the horſe without difficulty; but when the primæ viæ are nearly empty, the remaining feces are diſcharged by this concuſſion. Sailing in a ſhip is alſo an exerciſe of great uſe to weak people. If the veſſel moves with an even motion, by increaſing perſpiration it uſually excites a wonderful alacrity, creates an appetite, and promotes digeſtion. Theſe exerciſes are more eſpecially ſerviceable to weak people; but, in order to ſtrengthen the body by muſcular motion, running and bodily exerciſes are to be uſed. In theſe we ſhould begin with the moſt gentle, ſuch as walking, and increaſe it by degrees till we come to running. Thoſe exerciſes of the body are more eſpecially ſerviceable which give delight to the mind at the ſame time, as tennis, fencing, &c.; for which reaſon, the wiſdom of antiquity appointed rewards for thoſe who excelled in theſe gymnaſtic exerciſes,

Figure 2: *
Source scan: `page-1805-226885408318.jpg`